DECLARATION

I Sheena Upton, was solicited by a company in the United Kingdom, to play the role of Kerry Campbell in the United Kingdom newspaper, The Sun. The Sun's story was called "I give my 8 year old daughter Botox". I was provided with the story, instructions and a script to follow for a recorded interview for paid fee. I received $200 for that story.

I subsequently agreed to do interviews for ABC's "Good Morning America," and "Inside Edition." I was told that I would be paid a large fee for both of those interviews.

The truth is that I have never given my daughter Botox, nor allowed her to get any type of waxing, nor is she a beauty pageant contestant. Yesterday, on May 17, 2011, I went with my daughter to the U.C.L.A. Medical Center. She was examined there by a licensed doctor and dermatologist to determine whether or not she has not had any Botox injections or procedures. This test was done in the presence of a social worker.

After my daughter received a full medical exam, the results indicated that she has not ever received treatments including Botox or other such injections. A report of this examination was given to the Child Protective Services and I have a copy of that report.

I realize now that, at the time I made a bad decision to accept the role in the story for The Sun, and I regret my participation. The implications have been severe for my family as well as my daughter and myself.

I am able and willing to prove all facts written in the above statement.

I, Sheena Upton declare the above statement to be true and correct under the penalty of perjury for consideration of Court's requirement of "sworn statement."
